

Jung, Modern Man in Search of a Soul

When one begins as a young doctor, one's head is still full of clinical pictures and diagnoses.

In the course of the years, impressions of quite another kind accumulate.

One is struck by the enormous diversity of human individuals, by the chaotic profusion of individual cases, the special circumstances of whose lives and whose special characters produce clinical pictures that...can be squeezed into the straightjacket of a diagnosis only by force.

Dass and Bush, Compassion in Action

I have learnt to trust my intuition and I have learnt to do it sooner...I'm not going to resist actions based on my intuition just because I can't justify them. I don't find my judgmental faculty nearly.

When your intuition is trying to help

It can

- suggest a point
- blurt out words
- change your behaviour
- make you laugh
- alter the atmosphere

How to ask your intuition for help

Try

- taking a pause
- feeling the energy
- noticing irrelevancies
- using an image
- creating a vacuum

Salk, Anatomy of Reality

Only by cultivating and refining the processes of intuition and reason complementarily, only by reconciling each in the service of the other, can we achieve the wisdom we seek.
